July 12, 2011

An alleged stalker trying to reach Halle Berry's residence has just been arrested at 11:15 p.m. Monday night in her neighborhood, Sergeant Hoops of the LAPD Hollywood Division tells ET.

Over the weekend, a stalker allegedly tried to access Halle's property twice, prompting the actress to call the police on Saturday and Sunday. The perpetrator did not give up, returning to her residence on Monday, causing her to call cops for a third time.

Still on the loose, the resilient suspect crept back into her neighborhood late Monday night. A neighbor two houses down spotted him and reported the sighting to the police.

Halle has personally positively identified the suspect, the police confirm to ET. The stalker is en route to the police station now for processing.

Story is developing. Check back to ETonline for updates as they become available.

GISELE'S SUPER BOWL POTTY MOUTH

By PAIGE FEIGENBAUM

February 05, 2012

Although Madonna's Like a Prayer ricocheted through the stadium, Gisele Bündchen's blessings did not get answered from her "prayer circle" email blast. Just moments after the New England Patriots lost to the New York Giants 21-17 in a nail-biting fourth quarter, Tom Brady's supermodel wife loudly responded to taunts from a Giants fan.

While waiting for the elevator to leave the VIP suites at Lucas Oil Stadium, Gisele said, "My husband can not fg throw the ball and catch the ball at the same time. I can't believe they dropped the ball so many times."

Does Gisele need to get her mouth cleaned out with soap after this sore-losing comment?

SHE SAID WHAT? Indianapolis, Feb. 5

Gisele Bündchen consoles her husband, New England Patriots QB Tom Brady, after his Super Bowl loss to the N.Y. Giants—but had less kind words for his teammates, telling theinsider.com: "I can't believe they dropped the ball so many times!"

Gerard Butler 'Itching' to Be a Dad

ET

September 22, 2011

In Machine Gun Preacher, Gerard Butler assumes the role of real-life philanthropist Sam Childers. He not only fathers daughter Paige stateside, but becomes the paternal figure for hundreds of orphans in war-torn Africa. Does one of Hollywood's most notorious bachelors plan to pitch in on diaper duty one day?

"Yeah, without a doubt. I've been feeling that itch for a couple of years now," he told ET at the film's premiere. "When you're hanging out with these kids all day, like really, you do look at them and go, 'I could hang out with you forever.' They were a real joy in my life. I was heartbroken when I had to leave them."

Actress Madeline Carroll, who plays his teenage daughter in the film, thinks his boyish charm would translate well into fatherhood. "He plays a really good dad," she said. "Off camera, he's more like an older brother because he's always joking, always playing around." Michelle Monaghan lived every woman's fantasy as the wife of Gerry. Would the Scottish hunk make a good man of the house? "Not too shabby," she reported. "He's not a bad guy to come home to, is he?"

Well, Gerry may not have to look too hard for a contender. Sitcom actress Whitney Cummings was quite flirtatious with him earlier this week on The Tonight Show with Jay Leno. "I'm gonna give her a call a hundred times a day," he said of his prospective date. "No, it was fun. That girl is so very sexy and very funny."

Sexy is also a word often used to describe Gerry. Watch the video to find out how he's adjusted his 300 workout to embody the physique of a surfer dude for the upcoming film The Mavericks.

The real Sam Childers also cruised down the red carpet in his biker duds. He completely immersed himself in the development of the film, even inviting the screen writer to "basically move in with me for like a year." Hesitant with the casting at first, after screening the movie multiple times, the reformed thug turned do-gooder is "pleased" with Gerry's portrayal of his inspirational character.

The touching story even caught the attention of Avatar star Zoe Saldana, who praised the charitable cause at the premiere. And, hot off the Emmy red carpet, Jane Lynch's dress designer David Meister dreamed big on the next fashionable celebs he'd like to conquer... Cher, Jane Fonda, Angelina Jolie, and Your Royal Hotness Pippa Middleton! Machine Gun Preacher ricochets into theaters on Friday, September 23.

A witness at Mad Bulls Tavern in Sherman Oaks, CA gave ET an account of an incident involving Shia LaBeouf in the early morning hours of Saturday.

Shia, a regular at the bar, arrived to the establishment with a group of friends for a fun night out on the town on Friday. The witness tells ET that several hours later, he went to an outside patio to smoke a cigarette. The actor and another person exchanged words. The argument escalated and resulted in Shia being punched in the face at about 1 a.m. Saturday.

Police officers happened to be driving by when they noticed the scuffle. They stopped at the scene to investigate. Both parties declined to press charges, so no arrests were made. The men both went their separate ways. The incident was caught on surveillance footage, but the video will not be made public.

A source tells ET that the 'Transformers' actor "did not instigate the fight and the off duty LAPD, who was the security guard at the bar, confirmed that story."

Sandra Bullock Adopts Baby and Files for Divorce

April 28, 2010

Behind the tears of a marriage in shambles, Sandra Bullock is a glowing new mom, according to People. She also has filed for divorce from Jesse James, reports the Associated Press.

In an adoption process that Sandra and Jesse began four years ago, the then-happy couple finally brought home a baby boy in January. Born in New Orleans, 3 ½ month old Louis Bardo Bullock is introduced to the public in the latest issue of People, hitting newsstands Friday, April 30.

"He's just perfect," Sandra tells the magazine. "I can't even describe him any other way. It's like he's always been a part of our lives."

The family, including Jesse's children Sunny, 6, Jesse Jr., 12, and Chandler, 15 remained hush-hush about the new addition until now. Sandra will raise Louis as a single mom following her split with Jesse after allegations of numerous infidelities came to light.

Beyonce Delivers Baby-licious Performance

MTV

By PAIGE FEIGENBAUM
August 28, 2011

Beyonce "bumped" up the volume at the MTV Video Music Awards with a performance of Love on Top.

As a prelude to her big announcement, the Bootylicious singer spoke the words, "I want you to feel the love that's growing inside of me," as she took the stage. She proceeded to rub her stomach area throughout the performance. When the song finished, the pregnant-in-heels star unbuttoned her shimmering Dolce&Gabbana blazer to reveal a growing baby bump in a pair of high-rise "mom slacks."

The first-time mom-to-be announced her pregnancy earlier in the evening to MTV on the black carpet, but much of the live audience likely didn't have access to the popular trending topic by the time news spread on Twitter. Hearing the news for the first time, fans went wild.

Kanye West was next to proud papa Jay-Z and gave him a congratulatory pat. Jay-Z was beaming and gave a salute to the cameras. The MTV Video Music Awards aired live from Los Angeles on Sunday night on MTV.

Are Chad Ochocinco and Cheryl Burke Engaged?

What is the significance behind that sparkler Cheryl Burke was rocking on Monday night's "Dancing with the Stars?"

Her partner Chad Ochocinco insists, "It's a thank you. It's a gift. A friendly gift. In my world, we tend to give those that we care about gifts. Why is it such a 'wow'?" The blushing pro dancer did admit, "I fainted a little. A little concussion. [He] gave it to me in the trailer on one knee. And it's on my ring finger."

Does the twinkle in her eye hint at this being an engagement? She responded, "You never know." The football player said that, for now, the dance floor "will be our aisle." Only time will tell if this is a belated April Fools Day gag or if Cheryl will be walking down a real aisle toward Chad. While trying not to confirm or deny a brewing romance, he said charmingly, "She's made me smile for seven weeks now."

In fact, all of the celebs and pros were smiling ear to ear for making it to week three of competition on "DWTS." After quite the scare of being in the bottom two last Tuesday, Pamela Anderson is going to campaign harder for votes and will make sure Tommy Lee and their children dial in. To avoid going through the stress of facing elimination again, she is also taking volunteers to be her "stand-in" on the results show.

Kate Gosselin has eight little sets of fingers at home dancing across the keyboard to show their support for mommy. "They are hanging on every dance, every dance move and they are so proud of me," Kate said. "They were getting their popcorn ready and they were ready to watch," she found out when speaking to her brood 30 minutes before show time.

The top of the scoreboard welcomed a new couple with Evan Lysacek and partner Anna Trebunskaya edging out the leaders from the previous two weeks, Nicole Scherzinger and partner Derek Hough. He battled a rigorous training schedule this week, juggling his Stars on Ice tour and mastering the quickstep, all while nursing two broken toes. He said, "Injuries are part of being an athlete and this is a sport. It's a brand new sport for me. I'm working my feet differently than I ever have, so I'm not totally shocked by it."

"Dancing with the Stars" returns Tuesday night on ABC when one couple will be forced to hang up their dancing shoes for good.

Lisa Whelchel Snuffs Blair's Torch on 'Survivor'

By PAGE FEIGENBAUM September 19, 2012

Lisa Whelchel is trying to break free from her Facts of Life character Blair when the Survivor super fan becomes a castaway on Survivor: Philippines. But, her motto matches the theme song of her claim to fame-- "You take the good, you take the bad...."

"I'm not Blair and I'm not some snobby TV star. I'm Lisa, a momma of three," she tells ET. "There's no way [Blair] would play Survivor because her idea of suffering would be breaking a nail and she'd probably do that on day one and then she would vote herself out."

VIDEO: 'Facts of Life' Star Joining 'Survivor'

Fellow castaway Michael Skupin still associates the actress with her famous sitcom role. "She's still Blair to me," he admits. "I don't know if she'll ever be Lisa!" While Michael confesses to having "dated her in my mind," Russell Swan vied for the affection of her Facts of Life co-star. "I had the hots for Tutti," he exclaims.

As a devout Christian, Lisa was surprised when her underlying competitive spirit came to the surface on Survivor. Comparing the real-life game to Monopoly, she explains, "They're not playing pieces. I'm not playing with a top hat and a little iron and a shoe. I'm playing with real people and you care about them and you don't want to hurt them."

VIDEO: 'Facts of Life' Star Mindy Cohn's Makeover!

Lisa's unsure if she's up for an encore appearance on Survivor. Likening it to childbirth, when moms forget the pain because of the reward of a cute baby, she jokes, "I would want there to be an epidural somewhere on the island to anesthetize me from the suffering."

The 25th installment of Survivor premieres September 19 on CBS.

David Meister's Emmy Fashion Preview

By PAIGE FEIGENBAUM July 19, 2012

Designer David Meister visited the Entertainment Tonight wardrobe closet to give us a special Emmy red carpet fashion preview just hours after the nominations were announced.

Video: Behind the Scenes of the Emmy Nominations

Last year, David exclusively designed gowns for host Jane Lynch. When James Franco co-hosted the Oscars with Anne Hathaway a few years back, he wore drag for a segment. David has no plans to outfit host Jimmy Kimmel in a dress, but suggests, "I would rather sequined pajamas."

His magical design touch could be a lucky charm, since Tina Fey won an Emmy in a David Meister creation. "It's the first year she went glam," he remembers. "That was a pretty cool moment."

Sofia Vergara's hourglass figure is a hot commodity amongst all the top labels. "If I had to say who I would kill or knock someone to get to, probably her," he warned Vera Wang. He's also got his stylistic eyes on Nicole Kidman, Christina Hendricks, Julie Bowen, and Jessica Lange.

One nominee that can get away with anything on the red carpet is the iconic Betty White. "Betty is above fashion," David exclaimed. "She's transcendent." But, all the other nominees and guests should pay strict attention to the advice of their stylists to avoid making the infamous worst dressed lists.

Hilary Duff is Livin' La Vida Luca

By PAGE FEIGENBAUM June 04, 2012

Hilary Duff is oozing the new mom glow from every pore since giving birth to son Luca Cruz slightly over two months ago. Controversial parenting styles, slimmed down mommas, and pricy magazine covers have been making global news headlines recently. The grown up child star spoke candidly about her maternal instincts.

"I personally won't be breastfeeding my child that long," she told ETonline in comparison to the now-famous Time magazine cover, "but I don't have judgment towards anyone how they want to do it. It's their family, their rules." The first-time mommy has embraced advice from her mom, pediatrician, and books, but is sure to tailor everything to the perfect fit for her baby.

RELATED: Meet Hilary Duff's Baby Boy, Luca!

Baby Luca sure is the center of attention in the Duff family. Aside from bonding with his mom and grandma, he has a very special, affectionate aunt. Sister Haylie Duff "is very greedy," Hilary teased. But, when things get smelly and dirty, Luca is handed back to his mommy. "I don't think [Haylie] loves diaper changing," Hilary laughed.

The extra helping hands give Hilary a little time off to hit the gym. Motivated to shed the baby weight, she realizes it may not be realistic for her to drop 60 pounds as quickly as Beyonce. "I'm really impressed by her," she complimented. "It's different than losing weight than if you've just gained weight and you're trying to lose. Having a baby, your body purposely puts that weight on and it takes nine months to get there and it definitely takes a lot of hard work to get it off."

VIDEO: Beyonce Shows Off 60 Pound Weight Loss at Concert

Channeling her own energized Sasha Fierce, Hilary is relying on spinning, circuit training, and pilates four times per week. At a recent concert, music superstar Beyonce told the crowd she's limited herself to lettuce, while Hilary is carefully monitoring her own balanced diet that is high in protein with plenty of fruits and vegetables.

One of the first major decisions a celebrity parent is faced with is to sell or not to sell the lucrative first baby pic. Last week, Jessica Simpson landed the People cover with her firstborn daughter for a reported $800,000. Hilary chose to Tweet Luca's portrait for no profit.

"We got the offers to do the magazine covers as well and I have no judgment towards that in any way, especially if they're giving the money to charity," she explained. "It was controlled by me and there wasn't a big crew in my house doing it right in his face as a little baby. It was important for us to just do it quietly and naturally and not make a big deal of it." Resolute in offering her son a normal childhood, Hilary said she and husband Mike Comrie will move the family out of Hollywood if the paparazzi become too invasive on their privacy.

Chris Harrison Not Ready to Star as 'Bachelor'

By PAIGE FEIGENBAUM May 10, 2012

Chris Harrison told E!Online he won't be signing up to star as The Bachelor "any time soon." The newly-single host recently announced splitting from Gwen, his wife of 18 years.

"In all seriousness, getting out of a 22-year relationship, having two kids, and trying to [find] a new life, I'm thinking I wouldn't be a good candidate," he said of the casting prospect.

His personal pitfall will only better equip the empathetic host to offer contestants consoling advice. "Having loved myself and now felt heartbreak, I know what these people have gone through. I know what they're searching for. Everybody wants love. Everybody wants companionship. That's what makes the show so genius."

Related: 'The Bachelor' Host Reacts to Rozlyn's Comments About Him Flirting with Producer's Wife

Chris didn't shy away from addressing adulterous rumors that surfaced two years ago. "There was a contestant on the show who accused me of hitting on or flirting with one of the producer's wives," he acknowledged. The tabloids incorrectly spun it to be a cheating allegation. "It was completely a non-issue two years ago and completely a non-issue now," he said to set the record straight that it did not contribute to his divorce.

Will Chris ever hand out a rose to a lucky lady again? "I hopefully will fall in love again," he said optimistically. "Maybe more than ever, I believe in the search and what everybody is doing on the show... I haven't had a date in 22 years." Having traveled the world and witnessed elaborate dates, Chris certainly has some tricks up his sleeve to sweep a woman off her feet.

Video: Emily Maynard: I Want My Daughter to Have a Dad

Emily Maynard will be handing out a bouquet full of roses when The Bachelorette premieres on Monday, May 14 on ABC. She isn't the only gal looking for a male counterpart. Kelly Ripa is playing the fictional role of Bachelorette on Live with Kelly in her search for a new co-host. Chris will fill the seat next to her again on May 16 and 17, so perhaps he'll be on the receiving end in the rose ceremony.

Ryan Guzman 'Steps Up' to the Plate as Dancer

By PAGE MARA FEIGENBAUM November 26, 2012

Ryan Guzman had some pretty hefty dance shoes to fill as the lead of Step Up Revolution. Without any formal dance training, the model and MMA fighter joined a cast of professional dancers, including many So You Think You Can Dance alums.

Producer Adam Shankman sure was fooled at the rookie actor's try-out. "We didn't know he was a non-dancer," he says blindsided. "He lied. He danced really well in the audition."

The rhythmic cast got the newbie up to speed in no time. "They're so open and inviting. They're willing to teach me and spread their art form," Ryan tells ETonline. "There was no lack of chemistry [with Kathryn McCormick]."

Newly minted People's Sexiest Man Alive Channing Tatum met his now-wife Jenna Dewan when they co-starred in the first Step Up film, but Ryan stuck to the scripted romance with Kathryn. In real-life, he's still single. Of his predecessor's honor, he acknowledges Channing is "a very sexy man. He's got good looks and I think People got it right."

VIDEO: Is Ryan Guzman The Next Big Actor?

Ryan would be open to bringing his own sexy back to the big screen if approached to star in 50 Shades of Grey. "I'd love to go after it," he admits. "I've seen the character description. I've read some of the book. It's definitely not really me, but that's what's fun about it. Get a little naughty, get a little dirty."

Step Up Revolution diverted off course from the battling featured in previous installments of the ever-growing franchise and instead focused on the flash mob dance craze that has gone viral as an internet sensation. The flash mobs in the film were used as protest art, showcasing the culture of a Miami community that might be torn down for a construction development project. "It was strange to coincide with the whole Occupy movement," Adam tells ETonline. "Made it relevant. Happy accident."

VIDEO: Inside Ryan Guzman's Birthday Bash

One thing that has stayed consistent throughout all Step Up films is they all promise and deliver elaborate dance numbers. "When you have dancers that are that talented and that precise, you don't need as [many takes]," Adam boasts. "They give it to you pretty much every time. The movie is extremely well rehearsed."

Both Ryan and Adam agree that the Step Up Revolution DVD and Blu-ray, out November 27, makes a great stocking stuffer and can be enjoyed with the entire family this holiday season. Watch an exclusive bonus clip above.

'Homeland' Gets Presidential Stamp of Approval

By PAGE MARA FEIGENBAUM September 24, 2012

President Barack Obama has gone on the record as saying Homeland is one of his must-watch programs. At Showtime's Emmy Eve Soiree on Saturday night, Damian Lewis told ET about his special meeting with the Commander in Chief.

VIDEO: President Obama on Friendship with George Clooney

The Emmy winner recalls, "He invited me to the White House and I sat at his table and chatted with him. He told me he watches the show on Saturday afternoons when the girls go and play tennis with Michelle."

Unlike her loose gown on Emmy night, Claire Danes showed off a tiny baby bump in a form-fitting dress. The actress walked away victorious with a statue in hand on Sunday and told ET the night prior, "It's hugely flattering. It's always wonderful and amazing to be recognized on such a big scale, but even more than my nomination, I'm so proud of the show for being celebrated in such a big way."

PICS: Hit or Miss: The 2012 Emmys

Diego Klattenhoff said the show doesn't allow a breach in security of their secretive plotlines. "It's not hard. They basically torture us when we get back and make sure we didn't tell anything," he jests.

President Obama is far from the only big name who follows Homeland. John Legend, who performed at the event, says, "I'm on pins and needles wondering what's going to happen next."
